Silo Art Trail sees grain storage buildings used as artists' canvasses through Wimmera Mallee

1 The Devenish silo artwork painted by Melbourne artist Cam Scale is seen on Tuesday in Devenish, Australia. The Silo Art Trail is Australia's largest outdoor gallery. The trail started in 2016 and stretches over 200 kilometers, linking Brim with neighboring towns Lascelles, Patchewollock, Rosebery, Rupanyup and Sheep Hills in the Wimmera Mallee area of rural Victoria. The trail recognizes and celebrates the region's people through a series of large-scale mural portraits painted onto grain silos, many of which date back to the 1930s.

Kylie Jenner is world's youngest billionaire

2 Kylie Jenner on Tuesday was named the youngest self-made billionaire of all time by Forbes magazine, thanks to the booming cosmetics company she founded three years ago. Jenner, 21, the half-sister of reality television stars Kim, Khloe and Kourtney Kardashian, made it onto the annual Forbes list of billionaires after debuting her Kylie Cosmetics online in 2015 with $29 "lip kits" containing matching lipstick and lip liner. Forbes said she was both the world's youngest billionaire and also the youngest self-made billionaire ever. On their billionaires list, Forbes distinguishes between those who inherited much of their wealth and those who made their fortunes on their own. Kylie would be in 2,057th place whether she was self-made or inherited. Last year, Kylie Cosmetics did an estimated $360 million in sales, according to Forbes.

Pro wrestling legend King Kong Bundy dies at 61

3 Christopher Pallies, better known as pro wrestling legend King Kong Bundy, died Monday at the age of 61, World Wrestling Entertainment announced. The cause of death was not immediately known. Bundy, who also earned the moniker "walking condominium" due to his 6-foot-4, 458-pound frame, made his professional debut in 1981 under the name Chris Canyon before changing his name. Bundy was best known for his steel-cage match against Hulk Hogan in WrestleMania 2 in 1986, won by Hogan. He also eschewed the three-count pin, demanding referees count to five to show off his dominance over a fallen foe. Hogan, among others, took to Twitter on Tuesday to express his condolences: "Overwhelmed by King Kong Bundy's passing, only great memories. RIP big man, until we meet again."

NEWS

Experts say the case is proof of concept that scientists can one day end the disease.

An HIV-positive man in Britain has become the second known adult worldwide to be cleared of the AIDS virus after he received a bone marrow transplant from an HIV-resistant donor, his doctors said.

Almost three years after he received bone marrow stem cells from a donor with a rare genetic mutation that resists HIV infection — and more than 18 months after he came off antiretroviral drugs — highly sensitive tests still show no trace of the man's previous HIV infection.

"There is no virus there that we can measure. We can't detect anything," said Ravindra Gupta, a professor and HIV biologist who co-led a team of doctors treating the man.

AIDS experts said the case is proof of concept that scientists will one day be able to end AIDS, and marks a "critical moment" in the search for an HIV cure, but does not mean that cure has already been found.

Gupta described his patient as "functionally cured" and "in remission," but cautioned, "It's too early to say he's cured."

The man is being called "the London patient," in part because his case is similar to the first known case of a functional cure of HIV — in an American man, Timothy Brown, who became known as "the Berlin patient" when he underwent similar treatment in Germany in 2007 which also cleared his HIV.

Brown, who had been living in Berlin, has since moved to the United States and, according to HIV experts, is still HIV-free.

Some 37 million people worldwide are currently infected with HIV and the AIDS pandemic has killed about 35 million people worldwide since it began in the 1980s. Scientific research into the complex virus has in recent years led to the development of drug combinations that can keep it at bay in most patients.

Gupta, now at Cambridge University, treated the London patient when he was working at University College London. The man had contracted HIV in 2003, Gupta said, and in 2012 was also diagnosed with a type of blood cancer called Hodgkin's Lymphoma. REUTERS

Buddy vs. Duff premieres March 10 on Food Network.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

"Cake Boss" Buddy Valastro and the "Ace of Cakes" Duff Goldman are finally going head to head in a competition so sweet, it needed six weeks to be completed. In "Buddy vs. Duff," these two cake connoisseurs compete in a series of wacky, crazy and just plain impressive challenges where in the end, one of them is crowned the king of cakes.

The show premieres March 10 but many fans and cake lovers have been calling for a competition between the two stars for years, including the Cake Boss himself. "I think secretly I've always wanted to go head to head with Duff, and secretly he wanted to go head to head against me," Buddy says. "It's something that we both were never scared of and something we always wanted to do, time to give the fans what they want."

Buddy is not shy in front of the camera, he's been serving up extraordinarily gigantic cakes on TLC with the smash hit show "Cake Boss" for over a decade. Being on the popular show helped "train" the Hoboken native for the impending competition. "I gotta be honest with you the biggest thing that helped me was 'Cake Boss.' It's kind of like training for the Olympics right? When you think about it, what does a swimmer do? He swims every day. Doing 10 years of 'Cake Boss' every week trained me and Ralph to go to the Olympics of making cakes."

Although Buddy has gotten plenty of Olympic-style training in, not every part of the competition was easy. "The hardest was definitely the finale. We had four days to make the finale cake. I worked four days straight, 20 hours a day — I slept in my office."

In fact, some rounds of the competition proved to be extremely difficult, especially when facing former pastry chef Duff. "I think we had some episodes where he had advantages and some where I had advantages. One episode we had to do a plate of desserts, Duff worked as a pastry chef in restaurants and hotels. I never made a plate of desserts in my life really, I've been a baker."

Buddy and Duff have to accomplish incredible feats during the competition such as constructing elaborate car-inspired cakes, making carnival treats for hungry patrons, creating illusion cakes for a special show at Hollywood's Magic Castle and more.

But there were some rounds where baking a cake was as easy as riding a bike. "I know what I know, the difference is what I know I don't think about. I've done it so many years. When I pick up a rolling pin it's connected to my arm, it's a part of me. It's effortless. I don't think about it, I just do it," says Buddy.

In the end, Buddy had nothing but respect for the Charm City Cakes owner. "I knew who Duff was, but I didn't know him personally. After the competition, I have a lot more respect and admiration for him as a baker, as a person and as a pastry chef — and I think it's vice versa."

Buddy also thinks this competition is unlike many others that are out there now. The head-to-head part where he gets to verse another popular cake celebrity was just the icing on top of an already delicious show idea.

At the end of the day, the Carlos Bakeshop owner is just happy he got to show off his passion and art again. "That's why I became a baker. It's an art. You put your heart and soul into it and give it everything you've got and you step back and look at what you created. It gives you that feeling of self-worth, the feeling of this is why I do what I do. I got that through all six episodes, but the finale was the biggest, it was over the top"

Who will be crowned the champion? Tune in to Food Network on March 10.

The second-year quarterback is expected to be available on the trade market this offseason.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Tom Brady might want to play until he's 45, but that's not an excuse for the New England Patriots to neglect searching for the heir apparent over the next few years.

While the six-time Super Bowl champion can control his diet and, for the most part, his arm strength and accuracy, there is no magic potion to become immune to injuries.

Should anything happen to Brady, veteran Brian Hoyer is next in line to take over the Patriots offense. Based off his track record with limited success as a starter for teams like the Cleveland Browns and Houston Texans, there's little evidence that New England could maintain a dynastic run with him under center.

Granted, assuming that high level of play would be unfair for any prospective Brady successor.

Josh Rosen the future for the Pats?

If the Cardinals do, in fact, trade Josh Rosen, could he be the Patriots' future quarterback? GETTY IMAGES

The NFL Draft could provide a compelling opportunity for the Patriots to at least search for a future option, though there are far more pressing needs along the defensive line for management to spend their first-round pick on a quarterback.

Later-round options are also a possibility, but finding a diamond in the rough like the Patriots did with Brady 20 years ago is a once-in-a-lifetime feat.

Pillaging the free-agent market doesn't provide a logical avenue, either. Spending top dollar on a younger, but still veteran arm like Nick Foles — who is expected to sign with Jacksonville — is too high a price for a player that will sit behind Brady.

That's what makes the prospect of acquiring Arizona Cardinals passer Josh Rosen such an interesting scenario.

Rosen was selected 10th overall in the 2018 selection process and expected to be the golden boy of the future in Scottsdale. On the worst team in the league, the UCLA product exhibited plenty of growing pains in the NFL, completing just 55.2 percent of his passes for 2,278 yards, 11 touchdowns and 14 interceptions in 14 games.

He went just 3-10 as a starter.

It's worth noting that Rosen was behind the eight ball the moment he went under center for the Cardinals. Steve Wilks was fired after the 2018 season, his first as an NFL head coach, while the Cardinals offense that lacked any legitimate threat outside veteran wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald ranked dead last in the NFL.

It was a swift fall from grace for Rosen, who put up a strong junior season at UCLA in 2017, where he passed for 3,756 yards with 26 touchdowns and 10 interceptions in 11 games.

Now his time in Arizona is on the verge of being cut short after the hiring of former college head coach Kliff Kingsbury, who put together some high-octane offenses at Texas Tech.

In what is expected to be a pass-happy unit in 2019, the Cardinals offense under Kingsbury will be in need of a dual-threat quarterback who can extend the play with above-average athleticism, which is something Rosen is not. It's the main reason why all signs are pointing to them choosing Oklahoma product and reigning Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Kyler Murray with the No. 1 pick in the draft.

While Rosen's pocket-passing tendencies might not be a good fit in Arizona, they'd be a perfect fit in New England. With plenty of polishing left to do on his game, especially when it comes to turnovers, Rosen would have the two greatest teachers possible to help hone his skills as a legitimate starting quarterback in the NFL with Brady and head coach Bill Belichick.

Getting at least a year of learning and perfecting an intricate Patriots offense that ensures the quarterback isn't making an overwhelming amount of difficult throws could be an ideal spot for Rosen, who could come in and hit the ground running whenever Brady decides to call it quits.

Sox's Pedroia nearing spring debut

The veteran second baseman is close to taking the field once again after a nagging left knee injury.

Spring training games normally don't carry much clout. However, that won't be the case for the Boston Red Sox toward the end of the week.

Depending on the call of manager Alex Cora, veteran second baseman Dustin Pedroia will be making his spring debut either Thursday or Friday. At the moment, he's most likely to first take the field on Friday given that Thursday's affair is a nationally televised game.

Cora doesn't want Pedroia to try and do too much on the bigger stage, which heightens the risk of re-aggravating the left knee that has hampered him for much of the last two seasons. The 35-year-old played in 105 games back in 2017 and saw just three games of action in 2018.

Early returns on Pedroia's status for the end of the week have been good. The four-time all-star and 2008 AL MVP went through extensive workouts on Monday that went off without a hitch, including a batting-practice home run to straight-away center field that the veteran admitted he had never pulled off before in his life.

While batting practice bashes are promising, legitimate game action at the end of the week will allow the Red Sox to get an actual look at what they have with Pedroia for 2019.

"I can do everything," Pedroia told reporters. "They just don't want me to do everything all the time right away. So, it's slowly building up, but no, I feel great. Just keep it rolling."

Should he prove to Cora and the Red Sox's medical staff that he's at or near 100 percent, then it is expected that he will play between 120 and 125 games this season. As it stands, Pedroia is still penciled in as Boston's starting second baseman on Opening Day, which is a bit of a gamble. But Brock Holt and Eduardo Nunez provide capable options that will be available to fill in when needed.

Nunez, who will also play games at third base this season, is batting .364 in 11 at-bats this spring. Holt is batting .333 with one home run and four RBI.

Red Sox fans expecting to see the Pedroia of old should limit their expectations. While his health looks promising, Pedroia's better days are behind him and he will probably need some time to acclimate to live play after seeing just 11 at-bats last year.

Regardless, there shouldn't be a ton of pressure on the veteran to recreate some of his prime seasons. With a combination of Holt, Nunez and veteran Ian Kinsler — who is now with the San Diego Padres — the Red Sox had their best season in franchise history that culminated with a World Series championship.

The Red Sox face the Pittsburgh Pirates today, the Minnesota Twins on Thursday, and the Baltimore Orioles on Friday.

Aries Learn all you can. Knowledge is power, and it will help you deter someone trying to coax you into something that isn't right for you. Don't second-guess your plans.

Taurus Put your best foot forward and help those in need. What you learn will be enlightening and will encourage you to get involved in your community. Positive change is doable.

Gemini Spend more time deciding what's best for you. Walk away from anyone offering the impossible or trying to pressure you into something you don't need. Protect yourself against theft.

Cancer Partnerships, contracts and moneymaking opportunities look promising. Make changes that are conducive to getting ahead and establishing a better future. Ask and you shall receive.

Leo Be careful what you wish for. An offer will be riddled with complications. Set up your affairs to minimize outside control; you'll need to be the one calling the shots.

Virgo Focus on what's important and finish what you start. How you treat others will affect what people say about you. If you do good things, your reputation will precede you.

Libra Listen and observe to gain experience and information that will help you make better choices. Don't start something you cannot finish. Personal integrity and growth are favored.

Scorpio Take care of situations that involve others. Discussing possibilities and offering choices to the people you care about will foster an agreement that will encourage better relationships.

Sagittarius Make changes for the right reason. Don't take anyone's word. Find out the facts and walk away from emotionally manipulative individuals. Someone's motives should be questioned.

Capricorn Get ready, get fit and take action. You can achieve a lot if you size up your situation and put plans in motion that promote progress and life improvements.

Aquarius Don't let a last-minute change someone makes disrupt your day. Go about your business and do your own thing. Keep your life simple and doable to avoid frustration and interference.

Pisces Let your intuition guide you. An emotional matter will help clarify exactly what you should do to prevent anyone from taking advantage of you
